Dollar Slides To Postwar Low As Bonn Accepts Weaker Level

FRANKFURT - The dollar touched postwar lows against the Deutsche mark and Japanese yen on Tuesday before recovering slightly, and foreign-exchange traders said central banks appeared to be letting the market determine a stable level for the U.S. currency.

Intimacy: A Psychotherapy Grail for the Late '80s

NEW YORK - Intimacy, that combination of self-disclosure and emotional closeness, is carrying more of a premium than ever. Since the 1950s, surveys show, more people have come to see intimacy in friendship, at work and at home as increasingly important to their sense of satisfaction with life.

Whether it reflects increased consciousness or a genuine change in circumstances or needs, psychotherapists report seeing more patients who say they have trouble developing intimacy.

Problems with intimacy are relatively common these days," said Joseph Newirth, a psychoanalyst trainer at Adelphi University in Garden City, Long Island. "You see marriages in which both partners have the sense of not being known by the other, of not being noticed."

Therapists are finding, however, that the very resistance to intimacy that plagues personal relationships is a powerful tool in psychotherapy.

They said he took the official notes at meetings of the military general staff, and was often present at private interviews at which Mr. Ortega discussed tactics, strategy and intelligence with subordinates and foreign military advisers.

The government communique said that Major Miranda had been under investigation for "various anomalies." It said his extradition would be sought when he surfaced. The pro-Sandinist newspaper

Nuevo Diario reported Sunday that news of Major Miranda's flight "exploded like a bomb in government circles, causing shock and surprise." Major Miranda, 34, joined the Sandinist Front in the 1970s. As a guerrilla, he fought in crucial battles in southwestern Nicaragua. He became a close aide to Mr. Ortega soon after the Sandinists came to power in 1979.

The highest-ranking Sandinist to quit the movement was Eden Pastora Gómez, who at the time of his resignation in 1981 was deputy defense minister and chief of the militia. He later became an anti-Sandinist fighter, then gave up fighting and is now living in Costa Rica.

It was the worst outbreak of violence during a political demonstration since the country was founded in 1949. The incident also marked the first time that a policeman had been killed during a demonstration in West Germany.

The shootings were particularly alarming because they could mark the beginning of an increase in the use of violence by militant anarchists, who are known as "the an-tonomous" and who regularly fight with the police but had not previously killed anyone, government officials and private experts said.

It was suspected that the shots were fired by someone in "autonomous circles," security sources said. Many of the demonstrators wore masks, apparently to hide their identities.

Haiti Election Council Offices Burn

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (Reuters) — Fire damaged the offices of the Provisional Electoral Council on Tuesday after it rejected four presidential candidates who had served as ministers under the former dictator François Duvalier, witnesses said.

Another fire on Tuesday destroyed a Port-Au-Prince department store owned by Emmanuel Ambroise, a council member. Radio Métropole said that the office of an anti-Duvalier presidential candidate, Sylvio Claude, had been sprayed with bullets. Reynold Georges, another anti-Duvalier candidate in the elections, scheduled for Nov. 29, said that shots were fired Tuesday at his house and car. No casualties were reported in any of The Constituent Assembly drafted the new constitution, which instructed the council to reject candidates who had murdered, tortured, or embezzled under the Duvalier regime or supported it too zealously. François Duvalier died in 1971. His son, Jean-Claude, replaced him. He was toppled in February 1986 and fled to France.

TOULOUSE, France (Renters) — Four French astronomers asserted. Tuesday that they have observed "Einstein's Ring," an optical phenomenon predicted by Albert Einstein.

The effect was created by an enormous mass bending light into the apparent shape of a ring, Yannick Mellier of the Toulouse Observatory said. It was also known as a gravitational lens, he said.

Mr. Mellier, Bernard Fort, Guy Mathez and Geneviève Soncail established that an arc of light seen through a telescope in Hawaii in 1985 was the first known example of the phenomenon. Mr. Mellier said the ring was visible around a galaxy about seven billion light years away from

INTIMACY: More People Seeking Emotional Bonds

Judith Ladner, a therapist in Roslyn. New York, said: "There are many couples in which both partners fear intimacy so that even though they may consciously yearn for closeness, when they achieve a measure of that closeness, one or the other will create distance until the distance itself triggers a new move toward one another." Some researchers question the assumption that men have less nced for intimacy than do women. New data show that emotional intimacy is of nearly equal importance to both sexes but that there is a telling discrepancy in the place of intimacy in the emotional lives of men and women. The study, based in part on a national survey, is reported by Dan P. McAdams, a psychologist at Loyola University of Chicago, in the Journal of Per-

Dr. McAdams's study is the largest investigation to date of the need for intimacy. It is based on a new analysis of the responses of 1,208 men and women who were contacted during a national survey of mental health conducted by Joseph Veroff, a psychologist at the University of Michigan. That study, conducted in 1957 and 1976, showed that over the course of two decades people saw personal inti-macy as increasingly important as a source of personal fulfulment.

Men feel almost as great a need for intimacy, on average, as do and women deal with intimacy can women, Dr. McAdams will report help explain marital tensions, acin the Journal of Personality As- cording to research by Daniel sessment. He found in a separate Sternberg of Yale University and

Such intimacy seems to provide men with an emotional springboard of confidence and resilience that allows achievements "Men who value and have inti-ing to psychoanalytic thinking, can be traced to a poor relationship with one's parents in early childhood, such as an overly intrusive mother or too aloof father. Such parents can leave the child feeling wary of emotional manipulation or fearful of rejection. Such anxiety can result in adulthood in people who are clinging and dependent, or who are withdrawn or even hostile. Differences between how men

Italy Kidnappers Swap for a Monk

SASSARI, Sardinia - The wife of a wealthy Sardinian farmer, who had been kid-napped by bandits in July, has been released after a Franciscan monk traded places with her, Italian police sources said.

The monk, Giuseppe Solinas, handed himself over to the kidnappers on Friday, the source said. They said that he was still being held, apparently while a ransom was raised.

Time Bomb Is Found At Manila Summit Site

MANILA --- A time-bomb made up of 83 sticks of dynamite was found Tuesday in a building where Southeast Asian leaders are to hold a summit meeting next month.

The bomb was discovered hours before the Philippines' foreign sec-retary, Raul Manglapus, was due to fly to neighboring capitals to con-vince other members of the sixnation Association of Southeast Asian Nations that troubled Manila could assure the safety of summit guests.

Political analysts said the device might have been placed deliberate-ly to embarrass President Corazon Aquino, who has repeatedly declared that she sees no reason to abandon plans for the summit meeting, scheduled to be the third to be held by the Southeast Asian association in its 20-year history.

The police said the bomb lacked blasting caps and thus could not have been detonated, although it did have a timer and batteries. Meanwhile, a Manila newspaper reported that Communist rebels planned to strike at U.S. businessstation and resulted in at least six men in the Philippines as well as "It will get worse for the Americans before it gets better," the Financial Post newspaper quoted an unnamed spokesman for the guerrilla New People's Army as saying. The warning followed the killing hand grenades. Contingency plans were in place for the evacuation of service families if necessary, a U.S. Air Force spokesman said in a special broad-cast on U.S. military television. Lieutenant Arsenio Pinacate of the Philippine constabulary's Capital Command told reporters that 83 sticks of dynamite, each seven inches (17 centimeters) long had been recovered in a three-hour operation by police and army bomb disposal experts.

The leaders of all six Southeast Asian member countries — Brunei, Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines. Singapore and Thailand are expected to attend the summit meeting Dec. 14-16.

press conference that lasted for an hour and a half, Mr. Yakovlev, handled thorny questions with a style more reminiscent of an earlier generation of Soviet officials. He was asked why Mr. Gorbachev, in a major speech on Monday, had referred to the "thousands" and not the millions who had suffered under Stalin, He responded by suggesting that historical accounts of the millions of people purged or killed through forced collectivization under Stalin were "rumors." Western and some Soviet historians agree that at least seven million people died during the collectivization drive of the 1930s.

"Why do you think," Mr. Yakovley said in a reference to Mr. Gorbachev's remark, "that if he had said millions he would have been speaking more truthfully than if he had said thousands."

"I know the rumors that persist in the West," he said, adding that many rumors lie on the conscience of certain people."

Sanctions involving 100 percent tariffs on certain Japanese elec-tronic goods and totaling $300 million were imposed in April because of what Washington said was the aping of computer chips in the United States and in third countries and the failure of Japan to open its markets to U.S.-made chips.

The chief White House spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, said that $84 million in sanctions would be lifted "probably this week," leaving in place $165 million in sanctions

Using Econometrics In Buying Bordeaux

Where does a serious wine buyer or collector find the most trustworthy information on Bordeaux and Napa Valley red wines? Not in the "sensory evaluation" of wordy wine critics, says Orley Ashenfelter, an eco-nomics professor at Princeton University, but in long-term temperature and rainfall data. Mr. Ashenfelter, who specializes in econometrics, the application of statistics to economic problems, publishes a wine newsletter, "Liquid Assets." An associate collects weather data from public records at Mérignac Airport in Graves, near Bordeaux. Mr. Ashenfelter said

From 1952 to 1985, he noted, the median August-Sep-tember rainfall was 126.5 millimeters (4.9 inches). The median July-August temperature was 19.4 degrees centigrade (66.6 degrees Fahrenheit). "The only summers in this period with be low-median warmth and above-median rainfall were 1954, 1956, 1958, 1960, 1963, 1965,

Gorbachev: Pragmatism

In Beijing Deng Xiaoping quietly passes power to the next generation to continue a new and pragmatic economic course. He won the battles to do so over the last decade. In Moscow, Mikhail Gorbachev struggles to follow a similar path. His speech to com-memorate the Boishevik Revolution was littered with the historical warfare of 70 years

The ceremony in Beijing may be of more lasting significance, but the speech in Moscow holds more immediate importance. It opens a window into the mind and circumstances of the man who leads the second most powerful nation in the world and who will come to the United States in December for fateful negotiations.

Two things stand out about his address
Monday. He was decidedly the pragmatist, threading his way through past and present land mines. He was less startling in condemning past evils than Nikita Khrushchev in his famous Party Congress speech in 1956. But while Mr. Khrushchev's speech was secret and took years to seep into full view, Mr. Gorbachev's was carried live on Soviet television for almost three hours.

The new Soviet leader disappointed all who expected him to tell the whole truth about Soviet history. That so many had such high hopes shows how far toward openness Mr. Gorbachev has come. The disappointment shows how far he has to go. His speech also showed just how surrounded he is — by friends and enemies, ghosts and fellow leaders, the party elites and the masses. Lenin, of course, was praised without qualification for his "swift change of form and method, flexibility, unusual tactical solutions, political audacity ... "

When Mr. Gorbachev took up the Stalin era, he demanded that his courades face
"the bitter truth" — then hedged. He called Stalin's crimes "enormous and unforgivable," then reduced the millions who died in the purges and collectivization to "many thousands." It is tempting to see a compromise between Boris Yeltsin, the Moscow party leader who presses for faster change. and Yegor Ligachev, the second in command who resists blackening of the party's record. Mr. Gorbachev saved real fervor for his reforms. Some critics, he said, are too timid, and "prefer to keep ticking off the slip-ups" rather than seeking solutions. Others are "overly zealous and impatient." Reflecting the dilemma of a man who must at once exhort his people to greater activism and re them on food prices and job stabilreassure mem on rood prices and job sami-ity, Mr. Gorbachev urged the curious combi-nation of "revolutionary restraint."

There is an important message in this for the West, as the Reagan administration prepares for the Soviet leader's visit to Washing-ton. Mr. Gorbachev is sufficiently confident of his personal power that he goes directly to the Russian people. But he is sufficiently wary of support for his policies to tread carefully. Once again, this should warn the West against the unrealistic expectations. Mr. Gorbachev is bound by his own history, culture and political system. As a pragmatist, he never forgets that. The West shouldn't either.

Deng: Great Experiment

Characteristically, Deng Xiaoping, the octogenarian leader of China's latest and most promising phase of modernization, made astute political use of his retirement. He dragged out with him almost half the members of the Communist Party's Central Committee and Politburo, most of them, like him, the heroes of the old guard, but most of them, unlike him, footdraggers on reform. He arranged to retain, for now, anyway, chairmanship of the party commission that oversees the military. And his protege, Prime Minister Zhao

Ziyang, takes over as party leader. Not only has Mr. Deng survived revolution, war, purge and privation, he has had the wit to see that China had to start matching the material standards and competition of the industrialized democracies and that it could do so only by embracing selectively, their ways. Nine years ago he instituted a program of change that in its conceptual boldness and achievement surpasses anything the cautious oviets even now are contemplating.

Westerners note, with pride and a bit of their economy from the rigidities of central planning and adopting certain aspects of a free market. The Chinese insist, however, that they are building a "primary state of socialism" in which escape from lingering "semifeudal" and "semicolonial" conditions and the clutches of the bureaucracy will take until the middle of the next century. Thus, though reform is hailed as China's liberation, it is to proceed at a very gradual pace — a pace slow enough for the Communist Party. even while it loosens its grip at the local level on some activities, to retain monopoly control at the top. Or so it intends, anyway.

Mr. Deng realized that Mao's Cultural Mr. Deng realized that made continual Revolution was strangling China as well as brutalizing its people and that reform could advance only when China had entry to the world economy and no longer was in a state of international siege. This dictated a foreign policy of general accommodation, especially with the West. It gives the United States a huge stake in the success of the great multi-decade experiment that Mr. Deng is bequenthing, he hopes, to friendly heirs.

Don't Slam Shut the Door

The U.S. Congress passed the Immigra-tion Reform and Control Act last year to make it harder for new illegal aliens to stay in the country — and easier for old ones. The act provided amnesty for aliens who had been in the United States since at least 1982. But they were given only 12 months to apply, and even that time has been constricted, Fairness alone would impel Congress to keep the legalization door open an additional year, to May 4, 1989.

The first goal was to deter illegal imply grants by forbidding employers to hire them. Early evidence indicates that this goal is being met. The second goal was to bring out of the shadows hundreds of thousands of aliens who have lived in the country illegally, and furtively, for years. This goal has been less well met.

Many of the eligible aliens need more time to apply. The Immigration and Naturalization Service did not start taking applications until May 5. So far, across the nation, less than a million "illegals" have applied for legalized status. INS legalizetion offices are operating at 50 percent canacity in the West and only 20 percent in the East. If these rates continue, the program will legalize far fewer aliens than anticipated. Also, the approval process has been painfully slow. Only 75,000 amnesty requests have been granted. The most effective way to spur applications is to decide cases and let beneficiaries spread the word.

It comes as no surprise that the Immi-gration Service is still ironing the wrinkles out of this massive effort. There have been computer problems. National and regional information campaigns take time to develop. Outreach and networking have been inadequate: It takes vast effort to penetrate thousands of alien enclaves. In tions about length of continuous residence. proof of employment and policies regarding the protection of family members.

Aliens, some daunted by language, have hung back. Some do not understand the new law. Some fear, incorrectly, that even if one member of a family is eligible for amnesty, a spouse, parents or children could be deported based on information on the application form. There must be time for accurate information to be disseminated and digested, and for understanding and trust to develop. The Immigration Service is, after all, the agency that deports people. The Immigration Service has worked hard to make the amnesty program work. By extending legalization to May 4, 1989, Congress would ensure that it does. - THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Do Russians Want Change?

The growing resistance to perestroika, or restructuring, of which Mikhail Gorbaches spoke is a worrying phenomenon, but it did not prevent him from saying, on the Politburo's behalf, that the reform program would continue. But in the running of Moscow itself there have been signs that disagreement about pace has become disagreement about policy. And in factories, people unused to taking decisions resist the process Mr. Gorbachev has set afoot and calls democratization. The big question is: Do the Russian people want the changes Mr. Gor-bachev is determined they shall have? Are they so accustomed to obedience and confinement, like birds in a cage, that they can't think of how to handle the democratic socialism Mr. Gorbachev offers them? That looks like a real danger for, presumably, the relaxation of authority allows people to choose authority if that is what they prefer. Unfortunately there would be many among

Mr. Gorbachev's listeners in the Supreme Soviet who would applaud such a course. — The Guardian (London).

The Peril of a House Divided

Last Thursday, Attorney General Edwin Meese seized control of the U.S. presidency. jerked it hard to the right, and won Judge Douglas Ginsburg's nomination to the Su-preme Court. A few days earlier, Chief of Staff Howard Baker and Secretary of the Treasury James Baker had captured the White House and nudged it slightly to the center, when moderates got Ronald Reagan to say he was willing to negotiate a tax increase with Congress. But the times are too perilous to allow the luxury of ideological holy wars. Resolution of the critical issues of the day - the economy, the Gulf, arms control - demand a united, rational White House working in concert with Congress.

many of us in Japan feel it is about time we stopped doing their bidding. The United States has been calling the shots and sending conflicting eco-nomic signals for a decade. It has expected the rest of the world, especially Japan and West Germany, to underwrite America's inability to come to grips with its own problems. Now, as its problems are becoming critical, America wants Japan to come to the rescue, to carry a heavy share of its burden. There may be some good reasons for that - and we Japanese have tried to comply - but Americans cannot expect to comply—but Americans cannot expect to continue to exercise sole leadership.

The era of American hegemony has to end. We Japanese, along with a few European countries, have the right, and the obligation, to share leadership with the United States.

We must assert more control of our We must assert more control of our own affairs and begin to deal with our problems in a way that is right for the world, not just America or Japan. The Asahi Shimbun, Japan's biggest-circulation newspaper, recently carried a cartoon in which Big Brother, the United States, summons a Japanese official to do something. And the government acts promptly. The next frame of the cartoon shows a package tour of Japanese citizens fly-ing on a jumbo jet to Washington.

Takeshita's Adroitness Should Help

By Jiro Tokuyama

T OKYO — In helping choose No-boru Takeshita as the next president of the Liberal Democratic Party, and hence as Japan's next leader, the outgoing prime minister, Yasuhiro Nakasone, was seeking above all to preserve party unity.

Mr. Takeshita and the other candidates for the party presidency — for-mer Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe and Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa — have similar approaches to dealing with the urgent issues facing Japan, including economic friction with the United States, tax reform and land prices. The problem was how the party could avoid discord and close ranks to carry out the policies.

Mr. Nakasone realized that the influence of Mr. Takeshita, who heads the party's largest faction, with 114 members in the Diet, could not be ignored. Since Mr. Takeshita is an old friend of Mr. Abe's and has the support of Toshio Komoto, another fac-tion leader, his appointment as party president would ensure stability. And Mr. Takeshita, known for his pro-dence, could be expected not to do anything to alienate Mr. Miyazawa.

Still, doubts remained. The first concerned Mr. Takeshita's cautious political style. He likes to draft a scenario, let others have their say and, after watching the trend, reach a solution that enables all to save face. This has proved an effective method.

His ability to lay the groundwork and look after his followers is one of and others take the credit," he says. But Japan now faces an uncertain future. The international situation is changing rapidly. There may not be time, some critics say, for Mr. Takeshita always to await consensus.

His supporters disagree. A coordinator like Mr. Takeshita, they say, is exactly what Japan needs. The prime minister is faced today with the difficult task of balancing the vested interests in the country. At the same time he must have the toughness, as Mr. Nakasone did, to oppose the vested interests when it is for the greater good of the nation.

Mr. Takeshita showed his competence during the party's presidential campaign. Resisting calls from younger Diet members for a vote, he paved the way for Mr. Nakasone to choose by arbitration. Facing a possi-ble split in the Abe-Takeshita alliance, he maneuvered for the support of both the Komoto and the Nakasone factions. And after he was chosen, he pledged to pursue politics of "bold ideas and implementation." A second doubt concerned his lack of experience in international affairs. At age 47, he became chief cabinet secretary under Prime Minister Ei-saku Sato. He served twice as finance minister under Mr. Nakasone, and was the ruling party's secretary-general when named to be its president

He has never been foreign minister. As finance minister, however, he gained international experience at summit meetings and meetings of the Group of Five industrialized nations. Moreover, domestic and foreign policy issues have become increasingly intertwined in recent years.

And such external problems as agriculture and the removal of nontariff trade barriers involve vested interests that must be dealt with at home. Mr. Takeshita's adroitness in domestic affairs will be useful.

In foreign policy, Mr. Takeshita, like Mr. Nakasone, will emphasize Japan's role as a member of the free world and its ties to the United States. Mr. Takeshita probably will visit Washington soon. He is to attend the summit meeting of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations next mouth in Manila and to visit Seoul early next year. He will place high priority on improving relations with China. How closely will Mr. Takeshita be influenced by Mr. Nakasone?

During a meeting Oct. 15 with the prime minister, Mr. Takeshita said cryptically, "I have my own views regarding foreign policy, but I will listen carefully to your opinions."

further, the country could actually run a budget surplus in 1987, after correcting for inflation.

By focusing on the budget deficit, we also miss two policy changes that were fiscally very conservative. The first is the 1983 Social Socurity legislation, which cut future benefits. The change was the fiscal equivalent of running a $1 trillion surplus in 1983, but that didn't show up in the official deficit figures. In effect, the 1983 law took away most of the fiscal stimulus of the Reagan tax cuts of the 1980s. If Social Security liabilities are added in, total government debt actually would have declined slightly since 1980. The second thing missed by the deficit numbers was the effect of the greater emphasis on investment in-centives in the 1981 tax law. The incentives made new investment relatively cheap and lowered the value of existing assets. In effect, the change hurt older people, who owned exist-ing assets, and helped the young, who could take advantage of the enhanced tax incentives to buy new assets more cheaply. This highly conservative po-is that the "twin towers" are distorting

the U.S. economy, pushing down the dollar's value, raising interest rates,

And in doing so, Mr. Greenspan abandoned the futile strategy of the former Fed chairman, Paul Volcker.

That policy, of boosting interest rates, had as its first priority stability for the dollar, not stability of the economy. Mr. Greenspan changed that on Oct. 21 by easing money and interest rates. It was an implicit ac-knowledgment that the dollar must fall some more — gently, if possible — and that stability for the economy

But as everyone in financial markets knows, the Fed can't keep printing money forever, which could touch off a massive collapse of the dollar, and a lating the notion, and they minded that it had been left so vague for them.

A few years ago, a 12-year-old in Florida told me he had learned in school that it was wrong to call the United States democratic because it is a republic. He had no inkling of the difference between the principle of a government and the selection of its titular head. The Missouri college students were appalled to hear about it, but not really surprised. They were disdainful at what they considered most Americans' lack of knowledge about such basics.

They wanted to be journalists because they were seriously interested in public affairs and in providing the information a country needs to run itself and to make its society function satisfactorily. They wanted to travel and to learn and to know people different from themselves, not just to shine in television lights. They did not imagine they were going to change the world, fix all its flaws and save it from perdition. They did not even bother with the questions I often get from earnest do-gooders, such as "What should the press do to prevent war? What should the press do to assure peace? To save the environment? To eradicate poverty?" As if the press makes the world's decisions.

But they said they felt they could contribute by digging out and telling truth as best it can be found. "I think I can make a difference," said one student who clearly wanted to. They were worried about politics - no mention of the stock market - and particularly about choosing a president. They were sophisticated about how television can conceal and distort as well as reveal the essence of a candidate as he goes about manufacturing an image. They wondered how they could find out the telling details of a man's relations with his staff, the kind of people he listens to, the way he conceives of a politician's duty, which give much more insight into how he is likely to wield power and bear responsibility than do his campaign talks.

gation of the press, all the more in the age of high-tech public relations hype. They do not like being fooled and they do not want to take part in the fooling. They want to be told, and they want to tell, straightforwardly.

These were only a few students, on one campus, but they did seem to represent their classmates and their peers. They were optimistic but not dreamy, eager to get on and turn their hands to work they can consider useful and interesting. There has been much talking about "the closing of American minds," but there was no asking for more, not less substance in their education, and the opportunities they talked about were for responsibility and exertion, not self-indulgence.

This is a good sign when the mood seems gloomy and fearful, uncertain about the economy, fretting that a canny Russian leader is about to pull a fast one on a naive, trustful America, irritated that the world fails to see the United States through American eyes. The new crop looks fine, able and realistic.

Americans in Vietnam F.F. Clairmonte's comments on U.S.-

Vietnamese relations recall the latent anti-Americanism that was common among some members of the International Commission for Supervision and Control of Vietnam and Laos in Saigon in the 1950s. ("It Was Hardly a Partnership," Letters, Oct. 19.)

Having served as a U.S. Foreign Service officer in Vietnam before, during and after Mr. Clairmonte's experience, and having spent considerable time in the field with Vietnamese troops during the French Indochina war and the U.S. involvement, I find his attempt to attach a racist label to all U.S. advisers unacceptable. His allegation that Indian members of the ICSC, and the French, were victims of American racism is ludicrous.

The Indian army officers of the ICSC were hardly the type to suffer "a whiplash of humiliation" from any quarter, and the French in Vietnam at that time, military and civilians, spent more time sniping verbally at the "Americques" than worrying about their own bruised egos.

True, some U.S. advisers never did inderstand Vietnam or the Vietnamese. But for each adviser in that category there were many others who lived, worked, fought and often died with their Vietnamese counterparts. HOWARD R. SIMPSON.

Jim Brady's Painful Saga: There Can Be No Better Gift

By David S. Broder

Washington — For the last six-spiring story in Washington has been that of the struggle of the White House press secretary, Jim Brady, to recover from the near-fatal head wounds he received during the attempt by John Hinckley Jr. to assassinate President Ronald Reagan in March 1981. Now this story has been given the full-scale treatment it deserves in the book "Thumbs Up" by Mollie Dickenson, just published by William Morrow & Co.

It is a book that makes you weep, for pain and for joy, along with two of the most courageous people the United States can count among its citizens, Jim Brady and his wife, Sarah. Discount if you wish for my friendship with the Bradys and the author but, believe me, this is a Washington story that is a powerful antidote for the cynicismbreeding novels, memoirs and news stories that usually come from the capital.

It is a near-miracle there is such a story to tell. The first of six bullets that Hinckley fired from close range split Jim Brady's skull just above the left eyebrow, splintered and sent its fragments upward on a destructive, diagonal path ending just behind his right car.

In the emergency room at George Washington University Hospital, Dr. Arthur Kobrine, the surgeon who was treating Jim, told the president's physician, "It's a terrible injury. I don't think he has a chance ... but I think we should try." While Jim was still in surgery, the television networks were told, and reported, that he had died. But 24 hours later, he was able to squeeze Sarah's hand. The second night at the hospital, he could take a ball of gauze and tape, wind up and toss it across the room. The next morning, Jim's nurse had him demonstrate this for Dr. Kobrine, who asked him what he was throwing "Ball," Jim said, uttering his first word. And amid the tears of Sarah and the nurse, Betsi Horwath, Dr. Kobrine says, "It was then I knew that his computer hadn't crashed."

"The computer" that was saved was one of the quickest, wittiest minds in the political world, housed in a shapeless bulk of a body that made Jim defensively nickname himself "The Bear." Mollie Dickenson does not suggest that Jim's bulkiness helped save him, but his sense of humor clearly has been one of the keys to his recovery. Reading "Thumbs Up," it is extraordinary how often Jim's own observations make you laugh aloud at what would otherwise be almost unbearable circumstances. Thumbs Up" is unsparing in depicting the repeated setbacks, the all-but-overwhelming frustration that both Jim and Sarah Brady have faced.

When he beat the 10-1 odds against his even surviving through the surgery, and when he showed so quickly that he retained vital motor and mental skills. false bopes of a quick, complete recovery were raised. Two years after the shooting. Jim, seriously depressed, sobbed out his frustration to Dr. Kobrine. The surgeon, who had grown immensely fond of this patient, decided that it was time for "tough love." He told Jim: "You're shot in the brain. You're never going to be as good as you were. You've just got to be tough, Jim. You've just got to be tough."

Jim has been tough. And in a different way — which this book describes but does not romanticize - Sarah has demonstrated at least equal strength of character. As it is recounted how the Bradys have struggled to come to terms with the reality that "he had permanently en-tered the world of the disabled," one key is their ability to turn their personal plight into a lesson for others. Jim Brady has become a counselor, role model and inspiration to other parole motion and inspiring program of physical therapy. And Sarah Brady has become a national spokeswoman for the fight to control access to the kind of handguns that Hinckley used against her husband and the president.

The Brady saga is not finished. He continues in therapy, which now includes horseback riding, and his physi-cal mobility outside the wheelchair continues to improve. So does his endurance and his mental agility. Jim and Sarah Brady have become welcome regulars on the Washington social scene. At an autographing party for "Thumbs Up" last week, he had a word of personal greeting for everyone in line - and a joke.

With Jim Brady, you keep coming back to the sense of humor. Before the shooting, he delighted equally in quick one-liners and in complex tales of improbable romance and adventure, often involving mythic animals. Since the shooting the penchant for raunchy and/or ridiculous animal tales is just as strong. "You've got to persevere," he sold an interviewer last year. "Persevere, and keep your sense of humor. They

"Thumbs Up" is not specifically a Christmas book, or a self-help book, or an inspirational tome. It is a professionally written, remarkably unsentimental report on how two people have drawn the strength they needed from doctors, nurses, therapists, family members and friends - but most of all from each other and from themselves - to deal with the calamity that struck them and permanently altered their lives.

I can't think of a better Christmas present for anyone who is facing troubles, or someone who is heedless of the blessings in his own life.

His decision means all er Arab heads of state may also in Amman, Jordan, would bring a unified Arab position on relations with Iran received a severe setback Tuesday when King Fahd of Saudi Arabia said he would not attend the gathering.
The Saudi monarch is the second

Arab leader to say that he will not and in Amman noted that the news attend the meeting. While the deci-sion Monday by Colonel Moam-mar Gadhafi, the Libyan leader, to boycott the meeting came as a relief to many Arab leaders, King Fahd's mnouncement triggered fears that the first Arab gathering of heads of not only about Iran but also about state in five years might collapse even before it starts Sunday. Mr. Rafsanjani, apparently re-flecting Iran's formal answer to Mr. Pérez de Cuéllar over the weekend, condemned the United Nations "for issuing complicated resolutions" and "raising the question of an untimely cease-fire." British Royal Guards Confined to Barracks The Associated Press

LONDON — An entire 550-man battalion of Queen Elizabeth II's Coldstream Guards was con-fined indefinitely Tuesday to its barracks as the commander tried to identify soldiers who allegedly at-tacked a fellow guardsmen, the Ministry of Defense said.

The incident was the latest in a series involving bullying and rough hazing of recruits or other soldiers in British Army units. The ceremony of changing the queen's guard at Buckingham Palace was not affected as other units carried out the marching drill.

are just too important to the Soviet Union for them to turn against either," the diplomat continued. Therefore, the diplomat said, the Kremlin "will temporize" and ensure that an embargo resolution will be "weak and insignificant." Diplomats said there also were questions about whether China, a major arms supplier to Iran, would agree to the sort of arms embargo that Washington is hoping the United Nations will impose. Despite reported U.S. complaints to Beijing about sales to Iran of such arms as the surface-tosurface Silkworm missiles, which Iran used against Kuwait earlier this month, China has shown little inclination to curtail the arms sales that U.S. officials say have occorred. China denies the sales. A Gulf official, who asked not to be identified, said: "Frankly the prospects of forcing Iran into a cease-fire through an arms embargo is not very great. I fear this we will not end when the big powers want it to end, but will only end when Iran decides to end it for its

An Iranian Foreign Ministry spokesman said Monday that Iran and the Soviet Union did not issue a joint communique recognizing "the importance" of UN efforts to end the Gulf War, Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency said in a report monitored in Nicosia, Agence France-Presse reported. In a report Sunday, the Soviet news agency Tass cited a Soviet communique, issued at the end of Mr. Vorontsov's visit, that said both countries recognized "the im-portance" of UN efforts to resolve the conflict "by peaceful means, around a table of political negotiations."

 Bruce Springsteen, "Tunnel Of Love" (CBS): Although it is a happy surprise to hear Springsteen move toward the best of his possible worlds - between the unrelenting macho back-beat of "Born in the USA" and the "how sensitive I am" mood of "Nebraska" - this (No. 1 this week in the Billboard chart) is not a happy album.

His songs are therapy for him, and though his family scrapbooks and personal confessions are not across the country, a diamond watch, pounds of caviar, a fancy foreign car, a hundred pretty women knock down his door and folks he doesn't know want to kiss him, A Guil of all white a Chilean courting dance that the cy this world ever knew."

• Tom Waits, "Frank's Wild Years" (Island): No need to Q-tip your cars, it's not a short cicuit, your needle isn't dusty and nothing's wrong with the speakers. It's Tom Waits and his "Operachi Romantico in Two Acts," a story about how "One moonlit night Frank packed up his accordion and said blow wind blow wherever you may go . . . Cause I'm going straight to the top . . . up where the air is fresh and clean."

Asked by Musician magazine why Frank leaves Rainville ("a good place to dream yourself away from") by train, Waits responded: The thing about train travel, at least when you say goodbye they get gradually smaller. Airplanes, people go through a door and they're gone. They say now that jet lag is really your spirit catching up to your body."

His mournful wheeze reminds you of Louis Armstrong, Rudy wattee with his megaphone (actually it's a police bullhorn), Hoagy Carmichael, Howlin' Wolf, Captain Beefheart and Frank Sinatra with laryngitis. The accompanistances of despair. The lytics (by Waits and his wife, Kathleen Brennan) recall Bertolt Brecht, Jack Kerouac, Charles Bukowsky and Mark Twain:

"Hang on St. Christopher on the passenger side . . . The bats are in the beliry, the dew is on the moor . . . I drink a thousand shipwrecks, tonight I'll steal your paychecks. . The monkey rode the blade on an overhead fan, they paint the donkey blue if you pay-... Today is gray skies, tomor-row's tears, you'll have to wait till yesterday's here."

In the business of flying business people to the USA, we're only as good as your most recent experience with us.

This is why, in TWA Ambassador Class, we set out to earn our stripes every single day. On every single flight. To nearly 100 US cities.

The TWA Business Lounger on our 747's is the widest, most comfortable business seat in the sky. With plentiful legroom and elbow room. And our concern for your comfort isn't just limited to our seats.

Hence our exclusive Airport Express Service.

This lets you reserve your seat (Smoking/Non Smoking, Aisle/ Window) and obtain your boarding cards, long before your flight date. And you can do this for all your TWA flights to, in, and home from the US. This saves you time at the airport. As does our Ambassador Class priority Luggage Check-In. Once aboard the plane, you're welcomed with champagne.

If you fly with us frequently, you'll notice how regularly we vary our menu, to sustain your appetite for us. Your meals are attractively presented with china, glass

Will Europe's Loss Be the World's Gain?

UTY free existed in a rwilight world, tolerared by customs authorities as it developed into an $8 billion industry. In Europe it needed only two directives to rationalize the business. One in particular, the seventh, would have given it legal acceptance.

In a shock move, virtually a year ago to the day, the European Commission advised the European Council that it was withdrawing this directive.

The confidence shown at last year's Tax Free World Exhibition rurned to borror as the implications of this decision sunk in. After all, Europe accounts for some 46 percent of the world's duty free trade, a good half of which is transacted between EEC residents.

The EEC has set itself the task of eliminating internal economic frontiers by 1992. This arbitrary date is already raising problems in the drive to allow the freer movement of people, goods and money around the twelve member countries. For instance, more than 130 market opening schemes should have been approved last year, but are still under negotiation.

The decisions required are contained in well-intentioned memoranda rather than formalized legislation or draft directives. Committee discussion delays matters while common agreement is sought. The industry is seizing its opportunity to create a strong political and economic lobby while time remains.

Philippe Harron, currently on secondment as director of the International Civil Airports Association European Community Bureau from the British Airports Authority, has been the prime lobbyist at the EEC and industry coordinator the past five years. His members are going to be among the hardest hit, firstly by the loss of revenue from dury free sales and secondly by the cost of restructuring their airports to restrict sales to EEC travelers while allowing them to non-EEC residents.

Harron's lobbying platform is powerful and clear. He argues that duty free revenues keep fares down. Without them the EEC itself calculares that sea ferry fares would rise by 30 percent and air fares by 20 percent.

There is no denying that dury free is popular among has advised that there is no the slogan "Value Dury Free." sho international travelers, who tend to regard it as a right and recognize that it gives good value for money. But, equally importantly, the business provides jobs for some 250,000 people and promotes European exports by providing a high quality shop window to the world's travelers.

A further consideration, it discourages minor but cumulative smuggling by allowing open purchase. And it does no harm to national traders as the reduced prices allow travelers to pamper themselves with goods that they might otherwise be unable to afford.

. Nor does it affect aircraft safety. As Britain's aviation minister, Michael Spicer, MP, commented in reply to a parliamentary question: "My chief inspector of accidents evidence that the carriage of alcohol in aircraft passenger cabins has jeopardized survival of any survivable aircraft accident."

In Harron's view, duty free facilities should accompany and the slogan "Va This council us maskip of P now a member of Lords and p major English Dover, has apprelations company and the slogan "Va This council us alcohol in aircraft passenger of Lords and p major English Dover, has apprelations company and the slogan "Va This council us alcohol in aircraft passenger of Lords and p major English power in the slogan "Va This council us alcohol in aircraft passenger of Lords and p maskip of P now a member of Lords and p major English power in the slogan "Va This council us alcohol in aircraft passenger of Lords and p manship of P now a member of Lords and p maskip of P now a member of Lords and p maskip of P now a member of Lords and p maskip of Lords and p maskip of Lords and p maskip of P now a member of Lords and p maskip of L facilities should remain until the last customs officer in the EEC has been withdrawn. At the time of their privatization, Sir Norman Payne, chairman of the British Airports Authority, was asked if the termination of duty free to EEC residents would adversely affect the company. He expressed the view that the problem could probably be solved by swift diversification elsewhere and the raising of landing charges.

In Britain the industry has gathered itself under the title of The Duty Free Council and This council under the chairmanship of Peter Rees QC. now a member of the House of Lords and past MP for the major English Channel port of Dover, has appointed a public relations company, Profile, to plan its campaign. Companies from all parts of the British duty free industry are providing the funds.

It is also hoped that their international trade association the International Confederation of Suppliers to Airlines Airports and Shipping (ICO-SAAS) will link Britain's actions with those of the duty free trade in other EEC countries.

Meanwhile, the Europe against Cancer campaign is determined to eliminate the sale of tobacco in duty free shops. If this movement gains the desired momentum it could achieve its objective before the 1992 date in the current climate for duty free abolition. With the current concerns for reducing alcoholism and alcohol abuse, liquor sales in duty free may follow fast behind. That would decimate Europe's duty free trade well before the Commission's target date.

Before 1992 a new European Parliament is due to be elected. Perhaps the newly elected representatives will take a more benign view of this whole matter. Whatever the outcome, even if Europeans must suffer the loss of their treasured duty free, the rest of the world's travelers will still be able to make purchases as they depart from the continent.

Today's $8 Billion Market

ROM virtually nothing to $8 billion in something over thirty years is not bad by any industry's standards.

Originally based on an old maritime concession, dury free shopping as we know it today took off with the opening of a shop in Shannon Airport, Ireland in 1953.

Not surprisingly, with the advent of the jumbo jet and the rapid growth of air traffic in the 1970s, the business reflects the way that the mass of people travel.

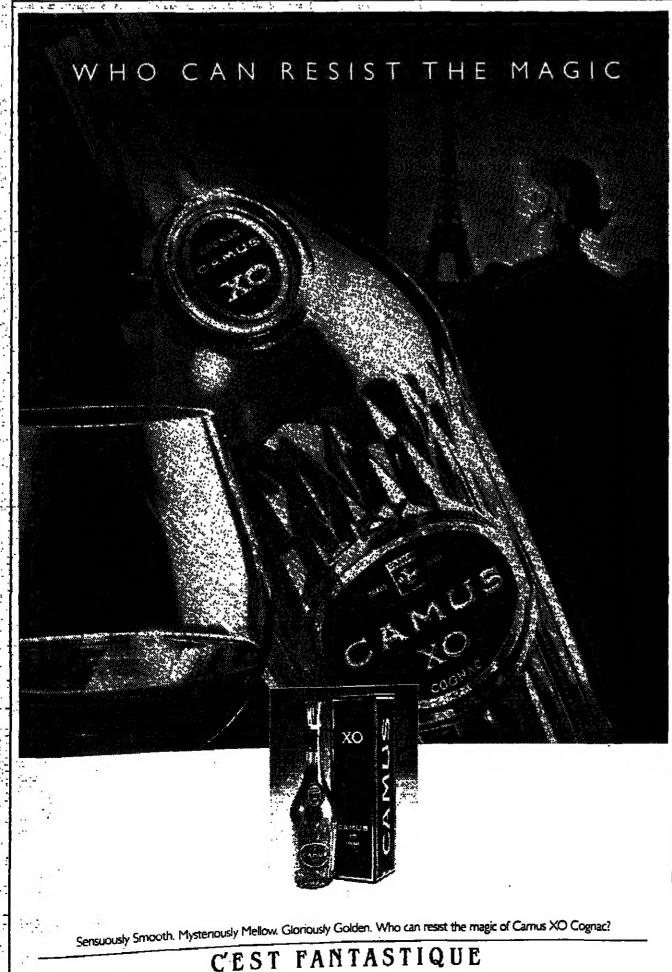

The nature of products sold and their relative importance has shifted somewhat over recent years. As greater diversity of products has been accepted for sale in the larger areas made available by airport operators to this highly profitable business, so the core products of tobacco and liquor have given way to the influx of fragances, electronics, fashion, luggage and other prod-

There are clear developments toward selling goods designed especially for easy and light transport and use, items such as liquor gift packs in easy-to-carry cartons, toiletry packs containing a selection of small bottles or a collection of miniaturized clothes iron, hair dryer and shaver, all in a special travel pouch.

World ferry traffic is mainly concentrated in certain areas such as the English Channel, the North Sea and the Baltic, where a very large trade is conducted between the Scandinavian countries. Because of the frequency of travel between its closely located countries, Europe has dominated the world's duty free trade. This is why the possible climination of duties and taxes berween member countries poses such a threat to this significant industry.

There is some contention as to whether duty free offers a real, rangible benefit. While duty or tax is deducted, the price is often considerably raised. Yet a typical demand made by a duty free franchiser is that prices be 20 percent below those in local cities.

The benefits, when all is said and done, depend on the nationality of the shopper. Buying whisky in Heathrow will certainly be advantageous for a Scandinavian or Japanese. However, since business expenses or holiday money is usually used for the purchase, caution is not necessarily the major concern.

Goldpfeil. This traditional name stands for highest quality all over the world. Our reputation began in Germany as early as 1856 when Ludwig Krumm began manufacturing cleverly designed and beautifully made purses and wallets. Today, connoisseurs of leather in more than 50 countries appreciate the wide range of Goldpfeil products which include luggage and other travel items, handbags, business accessories and specially designed gifts. Goldpfeil – when only the very best will do. We are exhibiting at the Tax Free World Exhibition in Cannes in the "Méditerranée Village" stand N 14.

variety of tastes to suit every preference. A name well known and developing strong ducy free sales is William Lawson's from the little town of Banff in Scotland. Here they have their own distillery. the MacDuff, which produces much of the malt whisky used for blending. More particularly, it produces the distinctive Glen Deveron single malt, which is exported around the world. Named after the nearby stream that provides the water for the distillery it is matured to both 5 years and 12 years to give its smooth, distinctive taste. These popular malts now hold the number two sales position. Lawson's Finest Blend Scotch Whisky is another firm favorite with scotch drinkers, particularly in Europe, and contributes significantly to some 7.5 million bottles bearing the William Lawson's name that are sold worldwide.

One of the most unusual single males to try is Isle of Jura. Its distinctive waisted bottle contains a 10-year-old whisky of remarkable character: an island male with a highland flavor. Isle of Jura is the only male whisky that bears the name of its place of origin.

The House of Camus, nored for its fine quality cognacs and Chabot armagnacs, is unique in that its brands have been predominantly built and Finlandia, exported to over 70 countries in the world, can be found on the world's leading airlines such as British Airways, Finnair, El Al, TAP. Wardair. Recent listings include Air Canada, Sydney airport and the majority of US-Canada border shops as well as the Adriatic coast of Yugoslavia. For a cool, clean drink there is nothing to match this delightful, ice clear liquor.

Britain's noted Beefeater Gin, produced in the heart of London, has brought its owners, James Burrough, the Queen's Award for Export Achievement five times. The only gin to achieve this distinction, it is sold in over 170 countries around the world, and long ago passed the ultimate test of the American martini to make its biggest mark in the U.S. and Canada.

For the international traveler this very individual gin can be found in virtually every duty free outlet.

For those people passing though Garwick airport there is an artractive promotion going on there that is well worth the £24.95 being asked. A specially produced 2 liter bottle of Beefeater Gin is presented, wrapped in a high quality towel and placed in a tough nylon sports bag.

For a really different version of a well tried drink, an unusual vodka from Germany is well worth trying. The family Gorbatchov, fleeing Russia after the October Revolution, established its distillery in 1921 to supply its own brand of vodka for the Russian colony that had settled in Berlin.

Now produced by Henkell & Sohnlein of Wiesbaden, it still uses the same special and jealously guarded recipe.

The bottle's unusual top is reminiscent of the domes of the buildings around Moscow's Red Square. Try drinking this vodka ice cold by itself or on any occasion with any food. Its clean, aroma free taste will refresh the most jaded palate.

Aimed specifically at international travelers and duty free shoppers are promotions by leading Scotch whisky producers Ballantine's. Noted for their fine quality blended whiskies, this company has always been active in developing the duty free business for its products. Visitors to Scandinavia will find in Norway that Ballantine's is 'Brand of the Month' in duty free in November and this will be followed by a promotion of their aged qualities in December. This may not put Dubai at the top of the big league tax free operators but it is the way in which the targets have been achieved - the outlets themselves, presentation, picked staff and some of the lowest prices in the world — that has had an impact on other tax free operations.

Onshore Haven

EGEND has it that the Ruler of Dubai, Sheikh Rashid bin Saced Al Maktoum, out for a picnic one day in the mid 1970s, saw a line of ships on the horizon waiting to unload their cargoes. "We must build bor in the world, it has berths a port - here!" he exclaimed, thrusting his stick into the ground at Jebel Ali. Five years ago the port was ready - but scarcely overused.

The largest man-made harfor 67 ships alongside nearly ren miles of wharves on the edge of the Arabian Gulf. Then in 1985 it was decided to turn the whole 7,500 acre site into a cax free zone, a kind of offsbore base within the emirate. Anyone wanting to use the free zone is offered a wide-ranging package of tax incentives and other benefits from cheap electricity to dutyfree exemptions on all imported goods and equipment.

Since the change in status to a fully fledged free 20ne, applications from companies wishing to set up manufacturing, assembly, or simply warehousing and distribution facilities, have been flowing in at a steady rate.

One of Jebel Ali's strengths is its strategic geographical location and its ability to serve a potential market area of more than one billion people.

This Advertising Section was written by Peter R. Wenban & Associates.

Comments Ed Butler, recently appointed marketing director: "We have now assigned more than 130 leases covering everything from offices to factory premises. We are really optimistic, especially about the manufacturing side, as we are offering some unique benefits."

Some of the big names which have taken the plunge and moved into Jebel Ali include Arco, Black & Decker, Toyo Menka, McDermort and Union Carbide. There has been so much interest from the rexule sector that a temporary "hold" has been put on any further applications.

Butler's view is that, with a $2 billion investment in the port and its infrastructure, the FZA has got to get down to business and get things moving. It cannot afford administrative hangups for whatever reason. One of the principal artractions to foreign operators and joint venture partners is that because Jebel Ali is in effect an "offshore" situation the FZA takes care of all immigration issues and the sponsorship problems which are a peculiarity of doing business in that part of the Arab world.

Also within the industrial area are several capital intensive industries such as the Dugas processing plant, one of the largest aluminum smelters in the region. Dugas also produces most of Dubai's fresh water from an associated desalination plant.

One of the newest developments is the combination of air-sea duty free cargo from Jebel Ali and the nearby international airport at Dubai, Many distributors and manufacturers from the Far East are shipping consumer goods to Jebel Ali and then flying them sir cargo for onward regional distribution. This cost effective solution can cut freight handling times by as much as one third.

OST diplomats already know what tourists and expatriates are now learning about tax free automobile purchases.

Special duty free prices for the finest makes of European automobiles, including Volvo, Saab, Mercedes-Benz, BMW, Audi, Volkswagen, Jaguar, Citroën and Fiat, can result in considerable savings. Increasingly, too, a network of duty free car dealers are offering top-of-the-line North American and Japanese models.

With a little advanced planning, a tourist can fly to Europe, visit either a car manufacturer offering duty free prices or a reputable dealer specializing in tax free shopping and drive off on vacation in the latest model. At the end of the tour, the tourist merely drops the new car off at the designated shipping center and, upon the new car's delivery in their home market, the duty free car buyer often finds that the savings on domestic taxes more than pays for the ultimate fly/drive vacation.

In many instances, purchases can be made on the spot, However, a two-month delay and a 25-percent deposit can be expected for a particular model or a custom-made product. Hence, the need to order in advance for pickup on arrival in Europe. An export place issued in one country allows for unhindered travel through almost all of the Continent. Insurance covering the vacation period, usually in the form of an international green card, offers total coverage. In addition, to facilitate touring, a wealth of information, including city and country maps, pamphlets detailing cultural events and information on international driving are offered by auto dealers and manufacturers.

With a duty free purchase, the vehicle can be driven for rwelve months in a country in which the customer does not reside. In some cases, this can be extended for an additional Diplomets and expatriates returning home have long been the backbone of the duty free car industry. Many of Europe's tax free dealers have been serving the diplomatic-/expatriate market for decades and have developed roadside service packages, technical compliance options, special at should also take into acinsurance and licensing amenities, all of which helps to take the hassle out of international driving. In addition, some dealers supply special tires and engine protection for

The amount you save buying a duty free car varies according to the country of registration and the level of purchase tax in those countries. For example, in most of Latin America, only diplomats can import a duty free car. North Americans save an average of 9 percent after all charges, while Europeans will save between 40 and 14 percent on local taxes if they qualify. In the Middle East and most Asian countries, savings of 25 percent can be expected. A Common Market resident domiciled outside the European Community can purchase a duty-free car, have it shipped to his destination and bring it back to his home country as part of the household effects without having to pay any taxes. This aspect of dury free automobile purchasing is expected to be even more appealing when intracommunity rariffs are amendcd by 1992.

A major factor in savings - besides local and national raxes — is the currency exchange rate, and duty free car sales volume reflects this. A European model that is base priced in Deutsche marks can be paid for in dollars at most duty free outlets at that day's exchange rates, so savings are very much dependent on the relative strength of the currency in which you are paying. Most dealers will help you select the most favorable currency prior to selling you a count the considerable savings such a purchase can make when combined with a European vacation or visit. If you compare the price of buying 2 new top model car in your home country versus the duty free price abroad, and add the savings that your new car will roll up in the form of local tourist transportation between Denmark, France, Germany, Holland and the U.K., for example, then buying duty free becomes even more advantageous. Frequent travelers also know that the best way to get around Europe and get a firsthand view of its picturesque peoples and villages is not in a large tourist bus, but in one's own car - and at one's own pace.

The duty free car industry is growing and has taken on an importance for manufacturers that is unique. The dealers find themselves competing to some degree with each other and the manufacturers by offering competitive after-sales service and prices. However, as one dealer noted, the future outlook for duty free car buying is positive, because more people around the world are traveling outside of their countries and, consequently, more people are becoming aware of the savings and availability of tax free purchasing.

The manufacturers themselves see dury free as deserving of special separate marketing efforts because - as in the duty free industry in general - the diplomats, expetrieres and tourists who buy are becoming a key part of the upmarker branding of their products.

Foreigners Get Cold Feet On the Nordic Exchanges

By PER ISAKSSON

TOCKHOLM - The plunge in world stock markets has prompted foreign investors to sell enormous amounts of shares on the Nordic stock exchanges, sowing doubts about whether foreign money will return, analysts say. They contend that foreigners, who entered the Swedish, Norwegian, Finnish and Danish markets only a few years ago, often had no alternative to withdrawing funds from the country because currency regulations prevented them from investing in other local second half of October. An institutional broker in Stockholm said, "They have just dumped shares wholesale." The Affarsvariden index on "free" shares open to overseas owners slumped by twice as much as the 22 percent for the Stockholm Stock Exchange's all-share index in the second half of

The exodus by the foreign investors, mainly U.S. and British institutions, was also evident on the much smaller Oslo, Helsinki and Copenhagen exchanges. For example, the Oslo Bourse allshare index fell 32 percent in the two weeks ending Friday, while the Helsinki Unitas index dropped 13 percent. In Denmark, the Copenhagen Stock Exchange index slid 14 percent.

Bankers said the retreat by foreign investors from the Oslo

Bourse, where they account for about 20 percent of volume, has put heavy pressure on the Norwegian krone, which lost almost 2 percent in value against other currencies last week.

Stein Brunn, a securities analyst at Den norske Creditbank said, "It has not been the major reason for the price falls, which is domestic investors reacting to the international situation, but it has greatly contributed to it."

HE PULLOUT from the Nordic exchanges has hit individual stocks hard. Shares in computer maker Norsk Data A/S, one of the few Norwegian stocks available to overseas investors, have plunged by about 60 percent in two weeks. In Sweden, Electrolux AB has seen the value of its free shares fall by 90 kronor ($14.57) to 234 kronor in the two weeks that ended Friday. In contrast, the company's restricted shares fell by only 15 kronor to 410.

In both Sweden and Norway, share analysts said they feared that current taxes on equity trading might discourage foreign investors from returning to the Nordic markets.

Tomas Nicolin, president of Ohman, a brokerage house, said in a reference to Sweden's 2 percent tax on share volume, "If foreign share trading is to function efficiently, the turnover tax will have to be abolished for foreigners." Norway's parliament plans to vote in mid-December on levving a similar, 1 percent tax.

Richard Josephson, an analyst with Enskilda Securities, the London arm of Sweden's Skandinaviska Enskilda Banken, said at a seminar last week that the only Swedish stock in which foreign investors would be big buyers was ASEA AB, before its merger with another maker of heavy industrial machinery, BBC Brown, Boveri & Co. of Switzerland.

"Interest in Swedish shares is very modest at present," agreed Harald Lunden, head of the New York office of the Swedish brokerage house Carnegie.

Mr. Karlin of Sweden's Share Promotion Association said it would be a long and tiresome process to rebuild confidence in the Stockholm Stock Exchange if the sell-off by foreigners continued.

Pennzoil Ruling Is Upheld

Texaco Indicates It May Seek Talks

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches NEW YORK - In a severe blow to Texaco Inc., the Texas Supreme Court has upheld the record $10,3 pillion judgment awarded by a jury to Pennzoil Co. as compensation for Texaco's interference with a merger contract.

Texaco said it would appeal the ruling to the U.S. Supreme Court, its last remaining appeal, but the company's president said Texaco hoped to reach a "reasonable" out-of-court settlement with Pennzoil,

James W. Kinnear, the president, said the Texas court's rejection of Texaco's request to reverse the judgment is a legal "atrocity that cannot go unchallenged." The Texas high court declined

Monday to hear arguments on the case, saying the Texas Court of Appeals had made no reversible error when it upheld the verdict in February. Analysts said shareholders and creditors were likely to step up pressure on Texaco, which filed in April for protection under federal inkruptcy rules, to settle.

"This is going to increase the pressure on Texaco from other creditors and shareholders to think about a settlement," said Jay Westbrook, a law professor at the University of Texas. "When you only have one more bite left on the apple, it tends to focus your mind on what needs to be done."

The case arose over a disputed 1984 merger between Texaco and Getty Oil Co. Pennzoil believed it had agreed to merge with Getty, but Getty's directors solicited a merger with Texaco to thwart the Pennzoil deal. Pennzoil sued Texaco for interfering with its contract, and in November 1985 won its verdict from a Houston jury.

Texaco stock fell $3.25 to close at $31 on the New York Stock Exchange. Pennzoil stock was up $10.625 to $65.50 a share. Moody's Investors Service Inc.

said Monday that it had downgraded Texaco's $8.2 billion of debt from Ca to Caa. (UPI, Reuters)

For South Africa, a Golden Cushion Precious Metal Softens Impact of World Stock Crisis

By William L. Claiborne Washington Post Service
JOHANNESBURG — In South Africa, all that glitters is gold. Stock markets may crash in New York, London and Tokyo, the world's industrial powers may impose punitive trade sanctions on South Africa and foreign corporations may pull out their capi-

But the economic reality in South Africa is gold, and everything else is little more than a sideshow. Never has that been demonstrated more clearly than during the worldwide equity-market crisis. "Investors in South Africa are far more concerned with advances in the gold price, the key to the entire domestic economy, than with swings in share prices overseas," said a Johannesburg stock-broker after a boom in the local stock market two weeks ago. Since the price plunge on Wall Street on Oct. 19, there have been up-and-down flutters in the price of gold resulting from investor uncertainty, from attempts by futures speculators to force prices upward and from moves by central banks around the world to stabilize the dollar. Similarly, there have been spasms in the Johannesburg Stock Exchange. The market climbed initially to a record high on the expectation that world investors would take cover in gold, then plunged 12 percent the next day when Wall Street's partial recovery seemed to dash those hopes. Despite the swings, gold has remained around $475 an ounce after initially touching $481 on Oct.

19, and local brokers are guardedly optimistic that weakened confidence in other investments will fuel world demand for gold and drive up its price even

Brokers here also noted that South African mining houses remained insulated from the turbulence as investors, including those abroad, rushed for Since gold was first discovered outside Johannesburg in 1884, it has dominated South Africa's economic life, lifting it above the destitution of its African neighbors while at the same time pro-foundly affecting its attitudes toward pressure for racial reform.

South Africa produces more than half of all the gold mined in the non-Communist world, and its underground reserves are estimated to account for about half of all the recoverable gold that exists in Gold accounts for nearly half of South Africa's export earnings. It brought in $8 billion last year, bolstering the Treasury with a $3.5 billion trade surplus, and rendering South Africa essentially nmune to trade sanctions. Mining exports, including gold, diamonds, coal and strategic minerals, account for 60 percent of the country's export earnings.

The general rule of thumb in the industry is that every $50 increase in the price of an ounce of gold means a $1 billion increase in South African export earnings. A $50 price increase looks plausible when viewed against the longstanding $35-perounce price of gold in 1974 and the jump from $280 an ounce in 1985 to more than $450 just two years user.

Industry executives and Western diplomatic analysis estimated that even though gold exports this See GOLD, Page 13

Lawson Predicts U.K. Growth Of 4% This Year

By Warren Getler ional Herald Tribune

LONDON - The chancellor of the Exchequer, Nigel Lawson, pre-dicted Tuesday that Britain's economy would grow by a healthy 4 percent this year and by 2.5 percent in 1988, despite uncertainties stemming from recent turbulence in world financial markets.

In his Autumn Statement to the House of Commons, Mr. Lawson sounded a bullish note on the British economy. He said that with resurgent exports and continued strong domestic demand, the nation's economy was well placed to "weather any storm" that could follow the recent drop in market

But the finance minister made no mention of any imminent cut in interest rates, a move that many market analysts had expected to encourage international expansion after market declines. British base lending rates were last cut by half a point, to 9.5 percent, on Oct. 23. Analysts say they now think that Britain will not slash its key lending rates again until the United States its budget deficit and West Germany agrees to lower its interest rates.

"I agree with the chancellor's generally upbeat tone," said Bill Martin, an economist at UBS-Phillips & Drew, the brokerage. "His formally announces moves to cut forecasts are sound."

But the Labor Party's spokesman on treasury affairs, John Smith, denounced Mr. Lawson's speech as a "confidence trick," noting that Britain still faced a worsening trade position and that manufacturing output had only recently returned to the level of 1979. Mr. Lawson said higher than expected growth this year had con-tributed to increased tax revenues, which by year-end were likely to exceed official forecasts by almost £2.5 billion ($4.25 billion). He said that as a result, the government's budget deficit for the fiscal year ending next March would be as low as £1 billion. Analysts said that although Mr. Lawson made no mention of possible tax cuts for the coming fiscal year, the revenue and spending projections suggested that there was ample flexibility for Mr. Lawson to achieve his goal of cutting the basic rate next year to 25 percent, from 27 percent.

Mr. Lawson acknowledged that Britain's trade performance would worsen next year. He said the deficit in the current account, the broadest measure of trade performance, would widen to £3.5 billion, from £2.5 billion this year.

Another blemish on the overall rosy scenario was a predicted rise in inflation from 4 percent at the end of this year to 4.5 percent a

Industry Output In Germany Fell 4.1% in Month

BONN - West German industrial production, seasonally adjusted, fell a provisional 3.6 percent in September after a downwardly revised 4.1 percent rise in August, the Economics Ministry said Tuesday.

The ministry had originally said output rose 4.6 percent in August.
On a two-month comparison.

which the ministry says it thinks is a better indicator of trends than data for one month, industrial output rose 2 percent in August and September.
The industrial production index, base 1980, stood at a provisional 103.8 in September. against 107.7 in August and 103.5 in July. According to the Bundesbank, the central bank, the production index stood at 105.2 in September last year, producing a year-to-year de-cline of 1.3 percent. Also on Tuesday, the Federal Labor Office said unemployment, unadjusted for seasonal factors, fell to 2.09 million, or 8.3 percent of the work force, in October, from 2.11 million, or 8.4 percent in Sentember.

AMEX Highs-Lows Three Are Freed on Bail

NYSE Highs-Lows

In the Guinness Scandal

LONDON — Three of five British business-men charged in the Guinness financial scandal were freed on bail by London magistrates on Tuesday. The three - Ernest Saunders, former chairman of the brewing company: Sir Jack Lyons, a financier, and Roger Seetig, former corporate director of Morgan Grenfell Group, a Gumness adviser — were freed on bail of £500,000 ($860,000) each until April 12, when their cases may be sent to a higher court.

One analyst in Frankfort said banks there had planned for a Nov. 9 sell-off. But, he said, "The date has not been officially confirmed or canceled. I presume it will be put off until next year."

· At short notice, VW canceled a company presentation for bankers in Frankfurt and Zurich that had been scheduled for Monday.

The presentation was expected to be an unofficial kick-off for the government's sale of its 4.8 million shares, but neither the company. nor Dresdner Bank, the host the West German presentation, had linked it to the privatization.

Since the stock market plunge, the automaker's shares have lost more than a quarter of their value, falling to 268.10 Deutsche marks (about $155) at Tuesday's close in Frankfurt from 366 DM on Oct.

Stephen Reitmann, European motor analyst with UBS-Phillips & 824.11 billion yen, up 4.4 percent Drew in London, said, "It would be from a year earlier. Pretax profit politically sensitive if the government were to sell at 270 marks." The government's original inten-

Mitsubishi Reports Net Rose 4.3% in First Half

TOKYO - Mitsubishi Motors Corp. has reported that unconsoli-dated net profit in the first half of fiscal 1987 rose 4.3 percent to 5.54 billion yen ($40.44 million).

Mitsubishi, which is affiliated with Chrysler Corp. of the United States, said Monday that unconsolidated sales in the first half totaled rose 95.6 percent to 10.60 billion yen. cent to 2.03 million vehicles. A strong 13.7 percent rise to 697,000 at home contrasted with a 7.7 percent decline abroad to 1.34 million. Share analysts said the ninemonth results tallied with expectations. But one said, "In the current stock market environment, no-one will take any notice of these figures. In a normal situation they could have lifted the stock."

Mr. Reitmann said he was expecting fairly flat results for the whole year, while others said they believed group net profit could rise to at least 600 million DM from 580 million DM in 1986.

Hans-Joechim Pilz, with Bank in Liechtenstein (Frankfurt) GmbH, said he thought that the climate for automobile sales in Europe and at home would deteriorate next year. This will affect VW in particu-

VW said sales had risen strongly at home and in Western Europe, but reported continuing problems in Latin America and the United U.S. sales fell 15.4 percent in the

Dean Witter Hires 27 From Salomon

By Arthur Highee International Herald Tribune

BUSINESS PEOPLE

Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., in an effort to rebuild its municipal-bond operation, has hired 27 municipalbond specialists, including two managing directors, from Salomon Brothers inc. Salomon announced last mouth that it was abandoning the municipals business because of low profits and was laying off about 800 employees.

John M. Donovan and R. Fenn Putman, who had been managing directors in the municipal-finance department at Salomon Brothers. have been recruited by Dean Witter as executive vice presidents for municipal finance

The New York Times reported that Dean Witter was moving to deepen its involvement in municipal finance at a time that the business has been racked by overcapacity and fewer new issues. This hostile environment has been cited for the departure from the field not only of Salomon but also of L.F. Rothschild Inc. and Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co. is also curtailing its municipal-bond operation sharply.

Dean Witter has had only a minor presence in public finance since 1981, when many of the company's best public-finance personnel resigned after it was acquired by Sears, Roebuck & Co. Its publicthe field, including Morgan Stanley; Merrill Lynch; Goldman, Sachs, and, until recently, Salomon Brothers. Boeing Co., the Scattle airliner manufacturer, said its chairman, T.A. Wilson, would retire on Dec. 31. Mr. Wilson, 66, has been chairman since 1972. Frank A. Shrontz, 55, president and chief executive officer, will assume the additional title of chairman Fokker NV, the Dutch aircraft manufacturer, which has been in financial difficulty, said it planned to appoint Erik-Jan Nederkoom, currently finance director of Transol, the Dutch oil company, as a member of its board of management. A rescue plan for Fokker announced by the government last week was contingent on the compa-

Allied-Signal Inc. of Morristown, New Jersey, said its vice chairman, Forrest N. Shumway, would retire early both from management and the board, effective Jan. 1. Mr. Shumway, 60, had been chairman and chief executive of Signal Cos. before Signal was acquired by Allied in 1985.

American Greetings Corp. of Cleveland said its president, Morry Weiss, had been named to the additional post of chief executive. Mr. Weiss, 47, succeeds Irving I. Stone, 78, who remains chairman. Mr. Stone is one of three sons of Jacob Sapirstein, who started the company in 1906, selling postcards from a horse-drawn wagon. He died in June at the age of 102. Mr. Weiss, president since 1978, is married to Mr. Stone's daughter, Judith. The company, with revenues approaching $1.2 billion, is the second largest greeting card company after Hallmark Cards Inc.

Exxon Corp. said Tuesday that Sidney J. Reso, an executive vice president of Exxon Co. International would succeed Richard G. form an independent production Reid as president of this interna-company linked to CBS and would tional division on Jan. 31, when $27.5 Million In Bonus Offers At Bond Corp.

Agence France-Presse PERTH, Australia - Alan Bond, the financier and yachtsman, says he plans to hand out bonuses totaling 41 million Australian dollars ($27.5 million U.S.) to retain the services of his top executives.

The biggest payment, 10 mil-lion Australian dollars, would go to the managing director of Bond Corp. Holdings, Peter Beckwith In return, Mr. Beckwith would be asked to agree not to join a rival company for four years if he quit the Bond company.

Five other senior Bond execurives would have to agree to remain with the organization for five years to qualify for payments. Bond Corp. is a diversified brewing, media, property, oil, gas and mineral resources

Mr. Bond, 49, headed the yacht syndicate that brought the America's Cup to Australia in 1983. The syndicate's yacht this year, Australia IV, was eliminated in races in which Dennis Conner in Stars & Stripes regained the cup for the United States.

Akzo Profit Dropped 20% In Quarter, Share Price Falls

Reuters AMSTERDAM - Alzo NV, the Dutch chemical company, said Tuesday that third-quarter profit fell 20 percent to 155.8 million guilders ($80 million) from 195.3 million a year earlier. The news of the lower than expected earnings sent its share price plunging.

Akzo shares fell 18 guilders to close at 99 guilders on the Amsterdam stock exchange.

Pan Am management earlier this year asked for larger wage and work-rule concessions than the $180 million a year that four unions were willing to give. Union employees own 7 percent of the holding company.

fibers business. Profit per share, 3.88 gnilders, was down from 4.8 and far below market expectation of 4.50 guilders, dealers said. Sales rose 3 percent to 3.87 bilion guilders from 3.75 bilion. As a result of the third-quart results, the company said it expected profit for the full year to fa below last year's level of 840 mi lion guilders.

"We're trailing too far behind last year's profit level to be able to bridge the gap in the fourth quanter," said Sieb Bergsma, a board member. "But we still think the final result will be good." For the first nine months, prototaled 526.8 million guilder down 16.6 percent from 526.8 mi lion in the comparable 1986 period

The chemical fiber business lo 24 million guilders in the thir quarter after a profit of 58 million year before. For the first nin months, the profit totaled only 4 million guilders, Mr. Bergsma said down sharply from the comparablingure of 226 million.

He said the decline in carnings in the fiber business reflected falling market prices and rising raw mate rial costs this year, which contrast ed sharply with last year when market prices held steady while ray material costs fell. Mr. Bergana cited the declinin dollar as the main factor forcin Akzo to cut margins to maintain i Akzo recorded a 26 percent in crease to 29 million guilders in op erating profit from its Akzo Cor sumer Products division, which it is planning to sell to Sara Lee Corp.'s Dutch subsidiary for 1.25 billion

Akzo expects the transaction to be completed by December, Mr Bergsma said, for an extraordinary gain of 450 million guilders. Roys Dutch/Shell Group has a 49 per cent stake in this Akzo unit.

A Power Struggle at Commerce Dept.

By Clyde H. Farnsworth New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - A power struggle has broken out in the U.S. Commerce Department under its new secretary, C. William Verity Jr., over his choice to fill the new iob of undersecretary for export administration, Commerce offi-

Seeking to place his own choice in the influential position, Mr. Ver-ity has proposed Robert W. Dean, an alumnus of the State Department, the Pentagon and the CIA.
Mr. Dean is now the senior director of international programs and technology affairs for the National Security Council.

But the choice has upset Senator Jake Garn, the senior Republican on the Senate Banking Committee and one of the most persistent critics of the Commerce Department's management of export licensing programs. Those programs are aimed at preventing advanced technology and other products that could have military use from reaching the Soviet Union and other unfriendly countries.

positions taken by the business community and the Pentagon. U.S. inesses say the controls hurt exports, and they assail curbs that bar them from a sale when their competitors in Western Europe and Japan are free to go after the same

The Pentagon complains that too much U.S. technology has been used in the Soviet military buildup. Mr. Garn has long fended with the Commerce Department over what he contended was its laxity in export-control policy. It was Mr. Garn's amendment to the Export Administration Act that mandated a reorganization in the Commerce Department, effective Oct. 1, under which export controls have higher priority.

Previously, management of the controls came under the undersec-nies by Washington's rigorous conretary for trade administration. trols.

Mr. Garn is reported to have written a letter to Mr. Verity urging that Mr. Freedenberg be named. The White House office of personnel is expected to make an announcement soon. The speculation is that Mr. Freedenberg will win. He has recently been consulting with allied governments in Western Europe to gather support for a min-

Base your investment strategy on the solid security of gold.

The shock waves that so dramatically rumbled through the world's stock markets are bringing investors back to the fundamentals. No investment is more fundamental than gold.

Why gold? Because gold is a precious metal - not merely a "piece of paper." Its value is intrinsic. Gold moves independently of strictly financial instruments. Gold can be your personal hedge against trade deficits, budget deficits, tight money, loose money, inflation and other political and economic uncertainties

Building up and maintaining one's personal assets naturally implies risk especially today, when virtually all forms of financial investment are being called into question. Given this overwhelming uncertainty, the shrewdest of today's investors know that a significant personal reserve in physical gold provides the solid bedrock on which to build a strong, more effective investment strategy.

> Start today to build up your personal reserve of gold bars or gold bullion coins, in complete confidence and confidentiality. See your bank or gold bullion dealer... or write for your free copy of the "European Guide to

Suez Flotation, Delayed by Stock Crisis, Is Reset

PARIS — Trading in the shares of the recently privatized merchant bank Compagnie Financière de Snez, delayed because of plunging stock prices, will begin Monday, the Finance Ministry said on Tues-

Private shareholders will be able to pay for their investment in two equal installments on Nov. 18 and a year later, the ministry said.

Listing of the shares on the Paris Bourse had been planned for last Thursday. But Finance Minister Edouard Balladur said that a 9 percent phinge in stock prices on the bourse the previous day made it necessary to push back the date. He did not specify a date then. If the shares had started trading there was a strong possibility that investors would have started with a paper loss. The shares, which carned an offering price of 317 francs (about $54.58) in last month's public subscription, were being traded at 300 to 310 francs in unofficial trading in London last week, after falling to about 270 francs.

U.S. Bonds Rise as Stock Market Renews Decline

Compiled by Our Staff From Disposcher NEW YORK - Prices of U.S. government bonds gamed as much as a point Tuesday as the U.S. stock market simmped and investors showed better than expected interest in the first phase of the Treasury's quarterly refunding

The Federal Reserve Board's generosity with reserves to the banking system also helped support prices, dealers said.

The Treasury's 30-year bond rose i 2/32 point, or just more than to 98 15/32 from Monday's finish

"The bond market gets hooked on a lot of different things over the course of a year, but right now they are watching stocks," said Maury Harris, economist for PaineWebber Group.

In the past two weeks, bond prices have soared as skittish investors looked for a safe haven from plunging stock markets worldwide.

The Treasury began its 523.75 billion quarterly sale on Tresday by auctioning $9.76 billion in three-year notes. It will sell 10-year

Kuwait's Stock Losses Estimated at $5 Billion

Reuters

KUWAIT — Knwait might have lost $5 billion when the world's stock markets plunged last month, said Jassem Saadoun, an influential Kuwaiti economist who is general manager of al-Shall Economic Consultants Group.

He said the losses would be concentrated in a reserve fund maintained for future generations of Kuwaitis.

of Kuwaitis.

Every year, Kuwait puts 10 percent of its oil revenues into this fund, whose value before the stock market collapse as about 14 billion dinars ($50.63 billion), Mr. Saadoun estimated. The National Bank of Kuwait put the fund's worth at the end of June at 15.3 billion dinars.

Mr. Saadoun estimated that about 80 percent of the fund was invested in the industrialized world, of which 40 percent was in stocks.

"If we assume an average decline of these stocks of around 30 percent, then the loss could be in the order of $5 billion," he said.

THE GOLDEN DROPLET

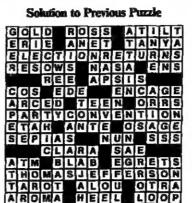

By Michel Tournier, Translated by Barbara Wright. 206 pages. $16.95. Doubleday, 245 Park Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10167.

Reviewed by Michiko Kakutani

I N his earlier novels, Michel Tournier, one of France's most controversial and acclaimed writers, has displayed a decided taste—and talent—for working philosophical variations on old stories. In "Friday," he turned "Robinon old stories. In "Friday," he turned "Roomson Crusoe" into a modernist allegory, in which the shipwrecked sailor rejects the blandishments of civilization; and in "The Four Wise Men," he reworked the story of the Magi, adding a fourth member to their fold. Now, in "The Golden Droplet," he takes the familiar figure of the innocent — the fellow who turns up in so many fairy tales and enies — and uses up in so many fairy tales and epics — and uses his adventures to meditate upon a favorite theme: the dynamic between innocence and experience, nature and civilization, individual and community, appearance and reality. When we first meet Tournier's hero, a Berber shepherd named Idris, he's a kind of teen-age Candide, leading an ascetic existence on an oasis in the middle of the Sahara. One day, wandering about the dunes, Idris comes across something he has never seen before; a Land-Rover, "squat, white with dust, bristling with cans, spare wheels, jacks, fire extinguishers, cans, spare wheels, Jacks, fire extinguishers, towropes, shovels, perforated metal sheets for freeing it from the sand." Riding in the vehicle are a man and a beautiful blond woman. The woman takes a photograph of Idris, and promises to mail him a copy of it, when she returns

Idris is excited by this encounter, but his mother warus him that the camera has stolen a piece of his soul, and she worries that he is now destined to leave the oasis. Sure enough, Idris soon decides that he must go in search of the woman who took his picture; and he prepares to set off for Paris. Just before leaving, he finds a lovely jewel, lying in the sand. As an ac-quaintance later tells him, this golden droplet or "bulla aurea" is "a Roman, or even Etruscan, emblem that still exists in some Saharan tribes. Freeborn Roman children wore this golden droplet around their nacks hanging on a special ring, as proof of their condition. When they exchanged their child's toga for the virile toga they also abandoned the bulla aurea and gave it as an offering to the household gods."

Indeed, Idris will lose this symbol of innocency and freedom midway through the quest for high

That quest, predictably enough, turns into a search for identity; and in the wake of leaving his childhood Eden, Idris has a series of adventures that will initiate him into the complexities of the nasty, grown-up world.

Once Idris reaches the City of Light, however, things begin to bog down—as they often do in the final portions of Tournier's novels. Events no longer seem to have any organic connection to one another, rather, they seem contrived simply to underscore the authors theme, which, this time around, seems both overly familiar and baldly expressed.

Real buys, and buys imperiously. Porto, even in its finest hour, is a selling club. No contest? This is organization, there seems to be where perverseness - Porto's and nothing to stop Real Madrid from of those willing to share its selfbelief - comes in.

Porto knows there are more fish Maradona thought he and his in the sea. Furt left, but did he alone outwit the West Germans in In Real's bejeweled path Vienna? Hardly. His star that night was eclipsed by Rabah Madjer. Who? Bayern Munich knows who: Its chairman agreed to terms

Tuesday to buy Madjer for three million marks ($1.75 million). Portuguese resistance is high. They won't release their man until June, by which time Porto may or may not have retained the Europemented Franz Beckenbauer, the an Cup. Believe me and believe West German national team man-

He showed it for Algeria at two World Cups, and he showed it in Vienna, scoring Porto's first goal, with an intuitive backheel, and creating the second.

Madjer is quick, he's smart he does the unexpected and, small as he is, he can rise like a salmon to score with his head. He will be 30 in February, a terrible old age that Munich, offering a three-year contract, is willing to ignore.

Where has he been all his life? Back home in Algiers he was less prominent than his sister, a televiit like an anesthesiologist adminis-tering ether. slowly, slowly — that he could beat players, help beat nations, beat even those superstars he might see on the TV screen on the TV screen.

Relatively uncoached, he arrives unaware of his ceiling. Algeria is an infant soccer nation, its federation formed in 1962 and its talents not yet systematized by coaching schemes reaching down to boys all but still in the cradle.

The young Madjer didn't know who or what he was. He tried to be a defender but, diminutive for that, became by 1982 a mini-star of the World Cup as a forward. Algeria shocked West Germany by winning, 2-1. Madjer scored, as did Lakhdar Belloumi, the "Platini of Africa" whose greater potential was later savaged by a Libyan play-er who broke his leg. Madjer came out of Belloum's Club Paris before joining Porto. Even at Porto, Madjer was second, often third fiddle. He was inconsistent, and where would be be without the craft of Futre or the strength of Fernando Gomes? We are beginning to find out, Futre has gone and Gomes, who shadow and passed through Racing gobbled up the majority of Porto's goals, is in bad odor. Yugoslav Tomislav Ivic, the new manager, has broken Porto's addiction to its big center-forward. Ivic dropped Gomes - forever, he says - for breaking camp last month during Porto's first-round visit to Skopje in Yugoslavia.

Porto is not suffering. It lies four points clear atop the Portuguese First Division, and Madjer has nine goals in ten games. The irrepress-ible Algerian struck three times in the European Cup in the club's 6-0 aggregate victory over Vardar Skopje, and midfielder Antonio de Sousa also netted home and away.
Of course, Real Madrid, with its thrilling "total football," will take care of one small African import. But that presupposes Porto is Madjer and a supporting cast of 10. It's not; its defense is a United Nations. The goalkeeper is a Polish giant, Josep Mlynarczyk. The center-backs are Brazilian, with the un-compromising Calso joined by the composed Geraldão, who captained Brazil's Olympic squad and then its senior team on a European tour last summer. Polish, Portuguese, Algerian or Brazilian, they adapt to Yugoslav cunning. The question is, can Real Madrid? Real won the first leg (played in Valencia because of Madrid booliganism) by 2-1 with a goal in injury time. Porto deployed Madjer as the lone raider and defended with spoiling tactics foreign to Porturnese nature.

This time, presumably, Porto must attack and Real will rely on breakaways.

The Spaniards' style is also imported, It is Dutch by concept and by design, controlled by a Dutch nager, Leo Beenhakker, who admits: "It is not natural for Spanish players to do what I am asking, to play one touch and move without the ball. It has cost me dearly some years of my life, the color of my hair - but we are now one of the st sides I have seen in 10 years."

Outclassing its first seven oppo-nents in the Spanish League, Real met an immovable Basque force last weekend, Athletic Bilbao, re-

Flyers' Brown Suspended 15 Games for Cross-Checking

The National Hockey League suspended Philadelphia right wing Dave Brown 15 games Monday for cross-checking New York Ranger Tomas Sandstrom in the face during a game Oct. 26. It equaled the second-longest suspension in league history for a player altercation. The NHL ruled that Brown, unprovoked, deliberately attacked Sandstrom, above; the Ranger right wing sustained a concussion. unprovoked, denocratery attacked Sandshold, above, the Mangal fight wing sustained a concassion. Brown had received a five-game suspension for high-sticking Sandshold last March. Boston's Eddie Shore was suspended for 16 contests in 1933 for hitting Ace Bailey of Toronto. NEW YORK - By staying healthy all season. Steve Balboni of the Kansas City Royals earned more money in bonuses, $525,000, than the baseball income earned in all ways by 473 major league players this year.

With 684 players on major league rosters or the disabled list on Aug. 31, before rosters expanded, that means Kansas City's designated hiner made more in bonuses than 69 percent of the players. Only one member of the Pittsburgh Pirates team, Andy Van Slyke, had a larger income than Balboni's bonuses and he exceeded them by only $25,000.

A study of salaries and bonuses for the 1987 season, based on data obtained from more than two dozen management and player sources, showed that Balboni earned the most money in bonuses. After he finished the 1986 season with a bad back, the Royals were willing to guarantee him only $100,000 in salary but provided for bonuses that he could earn as long as he was healthy, even if he did not play in

Soviets Appear Game to Turn Athletes Into Pros

MOSCOW - Professional, once a word applied to money-hungry Western athletes, is no longer such a derogatory term in the hallowed halls of the Soviet State Sports

Coaches, athletes and administrators are learning to say it with far greater case amid Mikhail Gorbachev's proclaimed policy of glasnost, openness and honesty in Soviet

At least one Soviet sport, soccer, is even trying it — with the Communist party's official blessing.

But the lack of experience in administering a professional sports league or franchise is painfully obvious. One spinoft: It has produced a bidding war for players with salaries approaching 600 rubles ($960) a month for stars - not much by Western standards but three times the average wage in the Soviet Union.

There is also a growing realization that Soviet sports teams playing in international competitions may be getting less than their fair share of the take by retaining an "amateur" tag. Some administrators, poorly versed in the financial aspects of sports, are short changed in the West.

Not long ago the Soviet Union vehemently condemned professionalism in sports as a the athletes do get remmerated," he said, purely Western phenomenon and disease "I think it is high-time to recognize higwhile touting the praises of its self-pro-claimed "purely amateur" program. The long red line of so-called agricultural students, policemen, soldiers and teachers who paraded to the medal stands in international competitions were, according to officials, nothing more than that. But today, with even the Olympic movement allowing professional athletes to compete in most sports, the Soviet Union finally appears ready to face the facts and recognize and reward its athletes as pros.

themselves, some of whom feel a tinge of bitterness toward the system that used them in their youth and abandoned them when they were past their prime. Valery Brumel, the high jumper and gold medal winner at the 1964 Tokyo Olympics. has surfaced as an unofficial spokesman for the professionalism movement.

Leading the chorus are former athletes

"We did not spare ourselves or our health. We were told for our people's sake, for the fatherland's prestige, and we went out of our way to win. Sport, sport, sport — that's all many of the colleagues had known professionally. We were not ama-teurs," Brumel said in a recent interview with the weekly Moscow News.

"But it was not the thing to speak of, that we had professionals in sports, even though time sports as a professional affair and to think about pensions for athletes."

Soviet athletes, depending on their skill level and sport, do receive spacious apartments, foreign travel and greater access to consumer goods. But once their playing days are over, such privileges are often reduced or withdrawn.

"I know a former champion who now works as a grave digger and an Olympic medal-winner who now works for his living by keeping a grocery clean," Brumel said.
"That is really sad."

Soviet newspapers have recently been crammed with stories about former sports heroes fallen on hard times. High were the cases of European and USSR boxing champion Viktor Miroshnichenko, who is now a down-and-out butcher on a rural farm. Suren Nalbandyan, a wrestling gold medalist at the Montreal Olympics in 1976, was recently released after three years in a labor camp for selling blackarket alcohol. Brumel is one of the lucky ones. He has a successful "second career" as an author and composer of music. Alexander Kozlovsky, head of the foreign relations department of the State Sports Committee says the idea of intro-closed, Kozlovsky said it would be about the same as that of an army colonel's. Like it or not, professionalism is being forced on more traditional sports administrators because of the economic reforms introduced in the country. As of January 1988, the government will substantially trim subsidies for unprofitable enterprises and businesses and will for the first time allow bankruptcies. With less subsidy money available, sports clubs almost always sponsored by a factory, a trade union, a government ministry or a farm collective — are being told they will have to pay their own way as well. The concept of self-financing stretches all the way to the top. Faced with potential cutbacks on its funds to train athletes for international events, the sports committee, the governing body of Soviet sport, is talk-ing of permitting more athletes to sign long-term contracts with Western teams. The player's salaries, carned in hard currency would revert to the committee or to a particular sports federation. The players themselves would get only an allowance. Reductant in the past to permit its athletes to reside abroad, the committee is finding that it may be financially forced to risk ducing pensions for big-time athletes has defection in exchange for the cash that top been agreed to in principle. Although the athletes can earn outside of the country.

The Kosher Constabulary

By Marianne Yen ashington Post Service

NEW YORK — Navigating among carcasses hung from metal hooks, sidestepping chunks of fat and gristle strewn on the concrete floor, the man in the white lab coat and hardhat paused in front of an elderly butcher wielding a 12-inch knife.

"You gotta cut these veins out!"
Max Goldgrab shouted above the din of meat processing.

"I know, I know," the butcher replied as he de-veined the meat. Goldgrab, 67, and his partner Malcolm Mintz, 58, are known as the Starsky and Hutch of New York's kosher police. More precisely, they are inspectors for the ko-sher division of the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets. Founded in 1882, the kosher division polices the billiondollar kosher meat industry to help ensure that the one million kosher consumers in the state, the largest concentration in the United States, get what they pay for.

times descend on more glamorous establishments in unannounced raids. A recent target was the liner Queen Elizabeth 2, which was serving prohibited hindquarters of meat to kosher passengers.

"I could sound very heroic, but it was so simple," Rubin said. "I was watching the news one day and I saw people getting off the QE2, complaining that it wasn't ready to sail. I wondered, of all the things they failed to put in order, if one of them wasn't the kosher kitchen. So I sent my men out there and they found violations." Cunard Lines acknowledged the infractions and paid a $2,400 fine. Their most memorable caper involved a company in the Catakill Mountains that "got away with murder for 40 years," Mintz said.

Cracking the case required them to don their wives' wigs and hang around the marketplace in the middle of the night picking up bits of information. Federal agriculture officials helped by planning an agent who identified non-kosher meat that was being sold to kosher

Daniel Auteuil's Success With Ugliness

By Richard Bernstein New York Times Service DARIS - Here is Daniel Au-

I teuil, arguably France's hottest young actor these days — or, at least, the one who got the best actor award at the French version of the Oscar ceremonies in Paris this year -- and he doesn't look it. He receives a visitor in an apartment in the unfashionable Porte de Saint-Cloud area of Paris, and the apartment has nothing of the movie star in it. There are a few sticks of cheap furniture, a bookshelf with not very many books, a few more records and compact discs, a picture of his girlfriend's grandmother — none of himself, not even one in his black tie and dinner jacket receiving the Cesar.

He did not always live like a graduate student. Before he attained star status, able to command his roles rather than be commanded by them, he had fast cars and expensive apartments. Paradoxically, as he tells it, it was success that changed his life and

"Godspell" was followed by a busy career in movies and on the

Then Claude Berri came up with the idea that Autenil might play Ugolin. "I read the novels, and I was absolutely subjugated by the story and by the very powerful feel-ing that only I could play this role," Auteuil said. "You know, it was one of those things, a Joan of Arc sort of experience, where you say That's it. I've got to have it." "So, I went to see Bern and he told me, 'You're too handsome for the part.' It's very flattering, but I was terrified. I went home and cut my hair just any old way, leaving holes all over. I dyed my-self a kind of rust color, following Pagnol's description of Ugolin. I let my beard grow and went back to see Berri 15 days later. We pushed the makeup a bit farther. I had the idea of putting on a false of using fake teeth.

h ciestific Annual Comments Francisco Comments Francis Co played a Liszt concerto with the Leningrad Philharmonic at Carne gie Hall, but the novelty was the U.S. debut of the Fazioli F308 concert grand piano — a 10-foot-3, inch monster with four pedals, a three-part lid and a fighting weight of 1,518 pounds. It is the product of Paolo Fazioli, a pianist and engineer who formed a small company in 1981 near Venice, turning out a line of grand planes topped by the F308, of which there are only three so far. At $77,000 or so, the F308 tops the 1,058-pound Bosendorier Imperial, which sells for around 575,000. Harold C. Schonberg of The New York Times thought it had a "clear, singing treble and plenty of power," but that the bas "may take some getting used to." Berman praised the F308 as a "bei canto piano," but said he had not stopped loving his Steinway.

Donna Rice, whose relationship with Gary Hart ended the former Colorado senator s 1988 Demo cratic presidential hopes, has broken off negotiations with ABC to make a film about Hart and herself. Both Hart's attorney and an ABC spokesman said the project had foundered because of what they called creative differences.
